WHY BARINGS KOREA FEEDER FUND (THE “FUND”)?

1. TECHNOLOGY LEADERSHIP REMAINS A CORE ENGINE OF KOREA’S GROWTH STORY

Korea maintains a leading position in the global memory industry, with Samsung Electronics and SK Hynix controlling nearly 70% of global DRAM (Dynamic Random-Access Memory) market share³ and dominating the HBM (High Bandwidth Memory) segment. Continued investment in AI servers and data centers has supported strong demand for advanced memory, keeping supply tight and supporting pricing and earnings momentum.

Beyond memory, AI-driven growth is extending across the broader technology value chain—from semiconductor equipment and displays to batteries—strengthening profitability, cash flows and balance-sheet quality among export-oriented Korean technology companies, which may support further potential for valuation re-rating.

DRAM and NAND Industry Revenue Growth²

2. GEOPOLITICAL RISKS TURNING INTO INDUSTRIAL OPPORTUNITIES

Korea is increasingly emerging as a key production and supply chain partner for the U.S. in the Asia Pacific region. Industrial beneficiaries span from shipbuilding, power grid equipment, energy storage, factory automation and robotics, many of which are exposed to long-term structural demand linked to U.S. reindustrialization and supply chain resilience. Additionally, Korea is now the second-largest supplier of air defense systems to the Gulf region, with competitively priced solutions addressing growing regional demand.

Surge in Korean Transformer Exports to the U.S.⁴

3. GOVERNMENT’S “VALUE-UP” PROGRAM UNDERPINS INVESTMENT GROWTH OVER THE LONG RUN

The “Value Up” corporate governance reform theme remains a multi-year catalyst for Korea’s equity market re-rating. Policymakers have demonstrated strong and sustained commitment to narrowing the valuation gap versus global peers through a broad and evolving package of shareholder-friendly reforms. These include measures to enhance company capital efficiency, improving transparency and provide incentives for higher dividends, increased share buybacks and treasury share cancellations.
