MANAGER'S COMMENTS NOVEMBER 2025

PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

Global markets faced three key crosscurrents in November 2025. Uncertainty over the Federal Reserve's policy path, amplified by a delayed US CPI release and data disruptions, drove a re-pricing of rate-cut expectations and heightened volatility. Commodities diverged sharply: precious and select industrial metals rallied, boosting miners and resource-linked EMEA equities, while subdued energy markets weighed on Arab Gulf performance. Geopolitical tensions around the Black Sea and spillovers into regional shipping and energy corridors sustained risk premiums across markets.

Against this backdrop, EMEA equities fell by 1.6% during the month, yet the portfolio outperformed the benchmark by 0.5% (in USD terms). Country-level outperformance was evenly split between sector allocation and stock selection, while sector-level gains were primarily allocation-driven.

Emerging Europe was the standout region. Hungary was led higher by OTP as the bank anticipates a rebound in mortgage lending to continue into early 2026 supported by state subsidies, alongside accelerating corporate lending growth after next year's elections. In Czech Republic, the financial sector performed well on positive spillover expectations from German fiscal stimulus, Czech Republic's comparative advantage in defence exports, a recovery in consumer demand, and expectations of more expansionary fiscal policy. Greece too was a notable performer led by the financials and utility provider, PPC Group.

In contrast, Saudi Arabia and the UAE were notable laggards. Tight liquidity and project curtailments weighed on Saudi Arabia, while profit-taking in the UAE compounded the impact of oil prices hovering in the low sixties.

The portfolio's positive relative returns were driven largely by stock selection in the materials and financials sectors, complemented by idiosyncratic underweight positions.

Within materials, Polish miner KGHM was a key contributor, reporting strong third-quarter results with higher adjusted EBITDA despite FX and revenue headwinds. Performance was underpinned by robust base and precious metals prices—particularly copper, gold and silver—and operational resilience across several assets.

South African miners AngloGold Ashanti and Valterra also added to returns as gold and platinum prices surged, further buoyed by the launch of a platinum futures contract on the Guangzhou Futures Exchange in China. AngloGold Ashanti additionally reported strong cash generation in the third quarter, supported by higher prices and increased production.

In financials, Polish insurer PZU delivered a notable contribution after third-quarter results exceeded market expectations, with stable premium growth and solid operating metrics reinforcing its income story and dividend outlook. Santander Polska also added to returns as investors priced in optimism linked to expectations of integration with Erste Group, which could unlock synergies and operational efficiencies over the medium term.

The portfolio's overweight positioning in South African banks also contributed strongly to relative returns as investors remain more optimistic on the recent fiscal and monetary policy developments in the country. Turkish lender Akbank, an overweight position, performed well, as investors anticipated that aggressive rate cuts would enhance net interest margins and return on equity into next year.

Meanwhile, the portfolio's underweight position in UAE lender Emirates NBD proved beneficial as shares retreated following the strong gains following its announcement of investing in Indian bank RBL. Underweight positions in Saudi names ACWA Power and ELM also supported returns as both sold off sharply alongside the broader market.

On the downside, Kuwait detracted from performance due to an overweight position in National Bank of Kuwait, which signalled potential capital raising should loan demand remain strong.

MANAGER'S COMMENTS NOVEMBER 2025

STRATEGY

We remain focused on unrecognised growth, and we continue to seek out bottom-up investment opportunities where the future earnings potential is not fully reflected in the current share price.

In the short term, the EMEA region will remain connected to shifts in global sentiment regarding the direction of interest rates, the fight against inflation and global growth prospects, nevertheless, the EMEA region has a range of unique companies and drivers.

OUTLOOK

The resurgence of US isolationism under President Trump is expected to hurt the United States' long-term economic prospects and cause the asset rotation outside the US to continue. EM equities experienced inflows and we expect emerging EMEA equity markets to continue to benefit from the trend. These markets offer well-managed, attractively valued companies that have delivered shareholder value irrespective of the economic cycle over the medium to long term.

From a European perspective, nations such as Poland, and Greece display favourable growth potential, robust public finances, and a steadfast commitment to defence expenditures and military capability.

Key Risks:

- Regional Funds have a narrower focus than those which invest broadly across markets and are therefore considered to be more risky.
- Emerging markets or less developed countries may face more political, economic or structural challenges than developed countries. Coupled with less developed regulation, this means your money is at greater risk
- Russia and the region pose special risks such as, economic and political unrest, lack of a transparent and reliable legal system, lower standards of corporate governance and an under developed process for enforcing legal ownership of investments
- Derivative instruments can make a profit or a loss and there is no guarantee that a financial derivative contract will achieve its intended outcome. The use of derivatives can increase the amount by which the Fund's value rises and falls and could expose the Fund to losses that are significantly greater than the cost of the derivative as a relatively small movement may have a larger impact on derivatives than the underlying assets
- Debt securities are subject to risks that the issuer will not meet its payment obligations (ie, default). Low rated (high yield) or equivalent unrated debt securities of the type in which the fund will invest generally offer a higher return than higher rated debt securities, but also are subject to greater risks that the issuer will default.
- Changes in exchange rates between the currency of the Fund and the currencies in which the assets of the Fund are valued can have the effect of increasing or decreasing the value of the Fund and any income generated
